

J 211 Text Story: Maegan Rose Monne

From an early age, Maegan Rose Monne knew she was destined for the world of fashion. Today, Monne is a brand manager at The Real Real, an online marketplace for authentic, consigned luxury goods. She secured this dream job straight out of college, and her role allows her to connect with clients who want to sell their luxury products. "All my clients are amazing. Each one has a unique story, and I get to be a part of that," she shares. Working at The Real Real has been a fulfilling experience for Monne. She connects with clients, stays ahead of fashion trends, and learns about the intricacies of the luxury market. "This job is a dream come true. I love the mix of creativity and business, and I get to work with people who share my passion for fashion," she says.

Monne's passion began in her childhood, inspired by her mother. "My mother and I used to play dress-up with her clothes. That's when I knew fashion was for me," she recalls fondly. Despite her enthusiasm, her bold fashion choices often made her feel out of place among her peers. "I felt like I was always trying too hard and being judged for my outfit choices," she admits. Encouraged by her father to blend fashion with business, Monne pursued a degree that combined both fields, determined to turn her passion into a career. Her college years were a whirlwind of fashion shows, internships, and classes, all of which prepared her for her role at The Real Real.

Kelsey, Monne's mother, reflected on her daughter's early interest in fashion. "I knew Maegan was destined to be a fashionista. Even at three years old, she had an eye for handbags and sunglasses. Watching her grow and follow her passion has been incredible. She combined her creativity with a strong work ethic, and it was no surprise she achieved so much." Kelsey's observations highlight Monne's early dedication and natural talent in fashion.

Looking ahead, Monne aspires to become a stylist. She emphasizes that fashion is not just about fitting in, but about expressing oneself authentically. "I want to inspire the world to embrace themselves and be bold," she says. Monne dreams of styling for high-profile clients and fashion shows, bringing her unique vision to the forefront of the fashion industry. Her journey from playing dress-up to working at The Real Real is a testament to her determination and love for fashion. She continues to aim for new heights in the fashion world.